HARRY MINER A $100,000 RISK. An Ex-Agent of the Equitable Sues for Com-

The physical condition of Henry C. Miner, the theatrical manager who is hustling up in the Ninth Congress district as if he was all there, will be the point on which a suit will largely turn which has been brought by William J. Madden to recover $7,421,23 as commissions on soft, that can be pressed like a spolicy of $100,000 on the life of Miner in the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Mudden, who has other litigation against the society, says that in October, 1888, he became one of its managing agents, who constitute what is known as the Board of Managers. In Septem ber, 1880, he says he received an application from Miner for a twenty years' endowment po!icy of $100,000. Madden says the policy was duly applied for by him, and after a time he was informed by letter from Dr. Lambert, medical director of the society, that Miner would not be in common withouther large insurance compa-nies, has a secret bureau, which looks up appli-cants in case of large risks, and sometimes appli-cations are rejected, as in this case, before an actual medical examination of the applicant is made. taken as a risk. Madden says that the society actual medical examination of the applicant is made.

Subsequently, Mr. Madden says, Mr. Miner obtained his policy through another agent. He claims through his counsel, Samuel Wyman Smith, that the society is bound to may him commissions unless it can show that at the time he differed Miner as a policy holder Miner was not a good risk. Madden says Miner was then a good risk and fully able to pay all premiums. Lawrer Smith says that there is no decision on record on the point as to whether an insurance company is not liable for commissions for rejecting such an application without cause.

Miner was to pay a premium of $5.885 each year. Hare's what Madden says he would have got if the risk had been taken from him: Twenty-five per cent. on $5.885, Sept. 15. 1889, or $1.473.85; 10 per cent. on $5.885, Sept. 16. 1890, or $3.89, 5.90, 1.0. 1890, or $3.89, 5.90, 1.0. 1890, or $4.890, 5.90, 1.0. 1890, 5

The defendant put in a demurrer, stating that the complaint did not show a cause of action. Plaintiff moved for judgment on the pleadings, but when the case came up before Judge tilder-sieves last week this motion was withdrawn by consent of counsel and argument on the demurrer was set down for Nov. 6.

Madden is suing the society to recover $50,000 for libel. The Sun Pays the Highest Hates.

STATE BANKERS' ASSOCIATION.

First Meeting of Group No. 9, Which In-cludes the New York City Banks. At the recent Convention in Albany of the State Hankers' Association it was agreed that subordinate associations, to be known as 'groups," should be formed throughout the State. These groups were to be composed of banks within convenient distances and were ar ranged as follows:

Group No. 1 in Buffalo, Group No. 2 is Rochester, Group No. 3 in Elmira, Group No. 4 in Syracuse, Group No. 5 in Utica, Group No. 6 in Albany, Group No. 7 (comprising all the banks in Westchester county, Putnam, Rockland, and Dutchess counties in this city, at the Lincoln National Bank, and Group No. 8 in Brooklyn. Saturday being a half holiday was chosen as the most convenient day for the meetings of representatives of banks composing each group. The New York group, No. 9, embraces ninetysix banks, of which seventy-seven have joined the association. The first meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the rooms of the Clearing House Association. It was presided over by

A THIEF AT THE WICKED GIBBS'S Pretended to be a Workman and Carried Off Mrs. Norcott's Diamonds.

On the morning of Oct. 8 Frederick S. Gibbs left word at an awning store at Twenty-fourth street and Eighth avenue for a man to go to his house at 427 West Twenty-second street and re-move the awnings. Shortly after a man called at Mr. Gibbs's house with a bag of tools and said he had been directed to take down the awnings. The cook and maid were the only ones in the house, as Mr. Gibbs's sister-in-law, Mrs. Norcott, and her daughter had gone shopping. The cott, and her daughter had gone shopping. The supposed workman was shown to the recention room, where he began to work. He had not been busy long before he called to the maid that Mr. Gibbs's dog had just escaped through a window. The maid ran out after the dog and spent ten minutes in a fruitless search.

When she returned the man had picked up his tools, saying he was going for more tools and would return in a few minutes. The man did not return, and this, coupled with the fact that the dog was found sleeping on an upper floor, aroused the maid's suspicions. When Mrs. Nor-cott got back from her tour she was told of the man's visit. An investigation showed that a small chamois bag, in which Mrs. Norest kept her diamonds, was missing. Mr. Gibbs learned later that no man had been sent from the awning store. The jeweiry consists of a pair of diamonds carrings, each atone weighing a carst and a quarter; a ring of the same sized stone, and a cluster ring containing sixteen stones.

ALD. DONOVAN AFTER KESSLER. Suing that Active Wine Agent for $19,000 Alderman Barthelemew Donovan began as ection in the City Court yesterday, through

Fromme Brothers, to recover $10,000 damages from George Kessler for an alleged assault at the Grand Union Hotel at Saratoga during the late Democratic Convention. Kessler, who is a wine agent, is the man who resented the hissing which Oscar Hammerstein gave one of his performers and who subsequently came out best in a set-to with Mr. Hammerstein.

Donovan says that on Sept. 26 hast, while he was to bed at the hotel. Kessier broke into his room and profuncly denounced him, calling him among other things a loafer and a man of imimmeral character. Mr. Donovan says that Kessier then assaulted him. He says he had never seen Kessier before. Subsequently Kessier then assaulted him. He says he had never seen Kessier before. Subsequently Kessier then has a head never seen Kessier before. Subsequently Kessier then ham he bedone a pear to Tammany Hall and that he would fix the Alderman in his district.

John Graham, a retired builder, who was in the room with honovan at the time and who lives at Sea Cliff, is also suing Kessier in the Supreme Court for $10.000 d.msgue for assault committed at the same time, as alleged, after wordy abose. wine agent, is the man who resented the hissing
